

All of the writing on this website, being www.marginalarts.com, or any associated Social Media Sites, is the copyright of Marginal Arts Festival, and is protected as such. None of the material may be reproduced without our written permission, with the exception of downloading or printing a single copy for yourself for your offline viewing. This copyright extends from original Marginal Arts Festival material, to the raw compilations of posts in our blogs and folders, to any edited and filtered compilations of post that we may sell and distribute.

Marginal Arts Festival reserves the right to republish any material contributed by our readers and members (this includes any information available in the public domain on the World Wide Web). By posting a message, a member of the public, subscriber or member expressly grants the right to Marginal Arts Festival to republish or sell the message as part of any edited compilations such as the website and its content.

Please do not submit material that is copyright protected without permission from the copyright owner. Since there are many thousands of possible sources spread out across the internet, it is impossible for us at Marginal Arts Festival to know if a posting represents a copyright infringement, the author of a posting or provider of web page content is responsible for ensuring that his/her message and content does not violate any extant copyrights.

Certain Names, Logos and/or phrases on these pages may constitute trademarks and/or copyrights of Marginal Arts Festival, or its clients. The mark Marginal Arts Festival, and its contents community area is the sole property of Marginal Arts Festival, reproduction in whole or in part is strictly prohibited without explicit written permission.

Email addresses from the postings on this site and email addresses contained within the web pages may not be used by third parties for the purpose of solicitation. Unsolicited emails to our clients or our members may also constitute misrepresentation, misappropriation of Marginal Arts Festival, business name and reputation, unfair competition, and violate laws that prohibit unsolicited email.
